Mid-Century Modern

THE MOULDING SHOWROOM AT DUNN LUMBER BELLEVUE

After World War II, a new generation of homeowners built countless Capes, ramblers, and ranch houses in the rapidly expanding suburbs around the country. From the split level to the super modern, these houses featured clean, minimalist moldings that reduced dust-catching shadow lines and often emphasized the quality of the wood. The signature profile of the era was the “clamshell” or sanitary molding, used in different scales for baseboards, casings, and more.
